My mac restarted yesterday and I had to turn it off in recovery mode. Today when it turns on again it doesn't show the Apple logo - instead it just shows the grey loading icon and nothing happens. It gives the error message: The Mac cannot be trusted at this time. It may have become damaged, is infected or is not functioning properly. If you use it, you cannot be sure that you will be able to recover it. You can help by trying to start it in recovery mode (option-R when the grey loading icon is visible, or by pressing alt-cmd-R when the grey loading icon is not visible). What is going on? How can I fix this issue? A: The grey logo is actually a placeholder image used when you boot from an external drive. If you are able to boot from another drive - navigate to recovery mode and select "disk utility" (disk_oneutil) which will start the Disk Utility. From here you can "Check disk" and repair your "disk". If this does not work - you will need to reinstall. Home » Business » Technology » What are the pros and cons of remote working?
